ABSTRACT

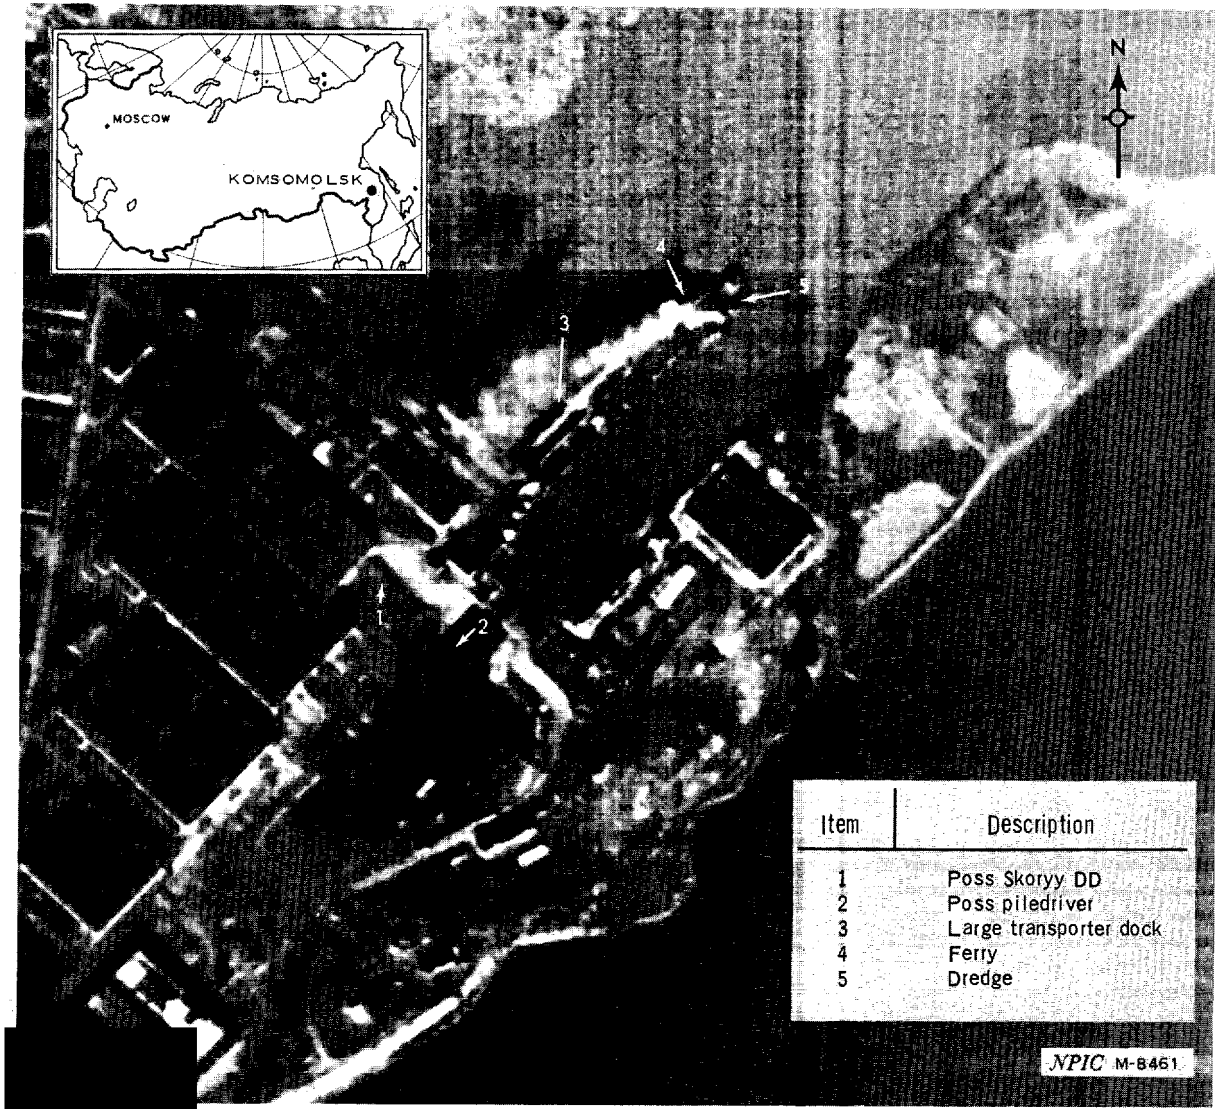

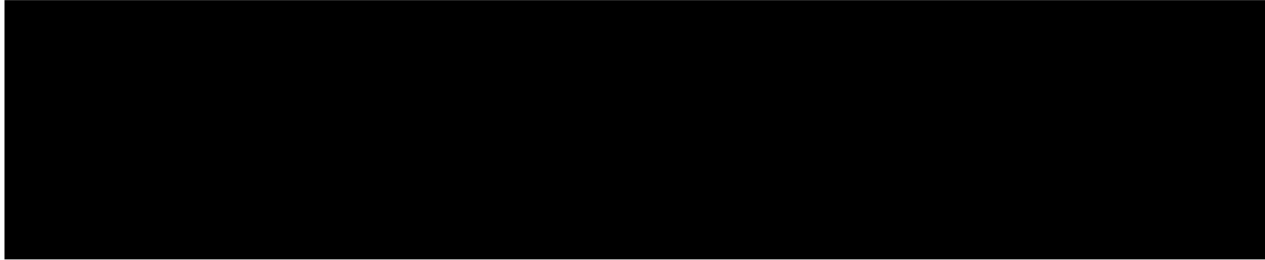

This report describes activity observed at Komsomolsk Shipyard Amur 199 on the KEYHOLE missions which covered the yard in the . No newly launched submarines or surface ships were seen at the yard during this period. Annotated photographs show the location of ships and submarine hull sections and the construction status of facilities at the shipyard.

BASIC DESCRIPTION

Komsomolsk Shipyard Amur 199 was seen on photography of (Figure 1). The bow of a possible Skoryy-class destroyer (DD) was observed protruding from buildingway 1 of the two-door construction hall.

The large transporter dock, a dredge, and a ferry were alongside the pier. A possible piledriver was positioned in the basin in front of way 2 of the two-door construction hall. The shop building was still under construction, and modifications of the basin to incorporate additional buildingways for Y-class ballistic missile submarine (SSBN) production were continuing.
